

The Libra Game: A Tool for Smart Decision Making

Hamad Jaouhari

Genre: Non-Fiction (Leadership, Self-Help, Personal Development)

The Libra Game is part of our life. Playing it is not optional; it's part of us.

We all live our lives without knowing when a difficult decision will appear, a test that we never expect to challenge us. When the time for a decision comes, we all tend to make a guess based on our previous experience. But this option doesn't necessarily always work, especially when the challenge is new or in an unfamiliar environment.

For this reason, it is very important to organize the elements based on the current situation and the environment to ensure that the decision is relevant.

The Libra Game provides a framework for dealing with difficult decisions.

It outlines a process to organize readers' experience, ideas, and other elements to help them produce the best possible outcomes in relation to the current environment.

Providing this opportunity to yourself, your family, your organization, and your community will help you be confident that you did your best to produce the best possible decision. Decisions that not only impact the moment, but that could provide a better future for generations.

So why not take this opportunity to study decision-making from a different perspective?
